Muskie Says U.S. May Curb Alien Fishing Off Coast

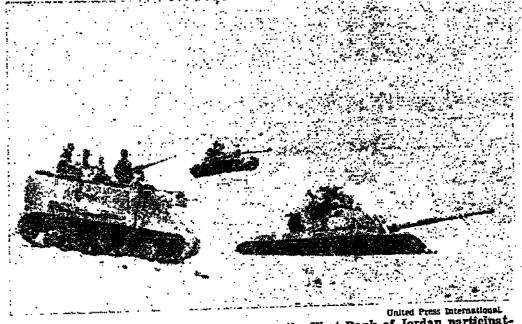

CARACAS. Aug. 6 (UPI).—The United States will probably ban foreign fishing fleets from a 200mile zone off its coasts before the 148-nation UN law of the sea conference drafts a convention of the oceans, Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-

Maine, said today.
"There are disturbing possibilities that the conference may not produce a treat; at all." Sen. Muskie said here at the end of a five-day visit to evaluate progress in the 10-week conference ending Aug. 29. Sen. Muskie, Scn. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, and Sen, Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., arrived last week with former Secretary of State Dean Rusk. The three senators stressed their concern over protection for American fishing resources from the long range fishing fleets of Japan, the Soviet Union and others. Sen. Muskie said that any action taken by Congress to ban foreign fishing fleets from a 200-mile offshore zone, which holds about 85 per cent of commercial fish, could be superseded by the eventual drafting of an international treaty governing man's uses of the sea. The Caracas meeting is the third attempt in 15 years to draft universally acceptable rules for the sea and with a little over three weeks before it closes, there appears to be no indication that a treaty will be achieved.

salem and Amman earlier in May. The sources said that he did not participate in the talks. The Israeli government issued denial after the first accounts of the meeting were published, but this was regarded as pro forma by most observers here. Mr. Rabin repeated it in a speech before parliament today, but he made it clear at the same time that his government was prepared to meet secretly with the Jordanians if that proved necessary. "Israel has not and will not neglect any opportunity to achieve contacts as openly as possible and as directly as possible with every neighboring country," he said. "Nor shall we reject opportunities to conduct dialogues without publicity, should the opposite side so desire for reasons of its own." Discussing the possible elements of an Israeli-Jordanian agreement in interviews here in the last two days, Israeli officials stressed that Israel was not prepared to grant King Hussein's demand for an Israeli withdrawal of some six to eight miles in depth along the entire length of the Jordan

But the officials said that more limited withdrawals at various points along the river-such as the key Damiya and Allenby bridges and the Pericho areawould be "conceivable."

"I think the Rabin government prepared to consider limited withdrawals as part of an agreement," an official said.

Israel Asserts Infiltrators Took Arabs to Lebanon

JERUSALEM, Aug. 6 (AP) .--Armed infiltrators from Lebanon kidnapped four Arab laborers working on an Israell security ience along the Lebanese border the Israeli military command said.

Israeli forces which entered Lebanon to rescue them came under Lebanese Army mortar fire, the command said. Another laborer, who escaped abduction, reported the incident to Israeli authorities, they said.

The laborers were from villages in an Israeli-occupied area of the Golan Heights. They were employed by Israel to build the fence, part of a security system to keep out Lebanese-based guerrillas, a communiqué said.

The Israelis arrested six suspects," the command said. The suspects came from a village where the hostages appeared to have been taken. The Israelis withdrew after exchanging fire with Lebanese forces, the command said. The four men were not reported to have been rescued.

Mr. Martin's tenure as ambassador to South Vietnam has been marked by his fierce counterattacks on both press and congressional critics of the Thieu government as well as of the U.S. role in adherence to the terms of the Paris agreement on

Mr. Moose and Mr. Melssner concluded that there was little hope for a negotiated settlement between the Vietnamese parties to the conflict.

The only hope for implementation of the peace agreement, the Senate study asserted, was an agreement among the United States, the Soviet Union and China "to reduce drastically the flow of military assistance to their clients." "We could detect no evidence in Saigon of active policy initiatives emanating from Washington directed at a solution to problems left unresolved by the Paris agreement. What we saw and heard, including conversations with senior officials, suggested to us that our present policy toward Vietnam is directed to the maintenance of the status quo at a time when Washington's attention is directed elsewhere, the report said.

One U.S. defense official in Saigon told Mr. Moose and Mr. Meissner that "the enemy has spent the past year in building the greatest military threat to that he r South Vietnam in the history of newsmen. the war." One significant area of Communist build-up has been in antiaircraft defenses which, the two aides reported, has reduced the effectiveness of South Vietnamese tactical air support.

The report also cited an intelligence estimate of Soviet and Chinese military and economic aid to North Vietnam of $715 million during 1973. Now, for the first time. it has been revealed that neither the Congress nor the American people had been told the entire truth about Watergate."

House and Senate leaders moved to speed up the impeachment process. Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montena said that, if the House moves quickly to send the matter to the Senate, the trial there could be over before the Nov. 5

Reps. Charles Wiggins, R-Calif., the President's chief defender on the Judiciary Committee; Robert McClory, R-Ill, the secondranking Republican on the panel, and Rep. Sandman all said they favored shortened debate. Rep. Wiggins, who made an emotional announcement vesterday that, if the President did not resign, he would vote for impeachment, said that debate should be limited to 10 hours and consideration of amendments and voting to another 20 hours.

Rep. Sandman, who announced similar decision today and said that he could not see how the Senate could fail to convict, urged that debate be cut to 20 hours.

Rep. McClory said that he favored starting the debate a week ahead of schedule and limiting it to a day. . If the House action is speeded, Sen. Mansfield said that the tentative trial date in the Senate could be moved up from late September. He said that he expected that the President would be given "10 days to three weeks" adding that "a madness has broken forth in this House." Sen. you try to cover it up."

On June 23, about two hours after he received the President's go-ahead, Mr. Haldeman met with the then CIA director, Richard Helms, and Gen. Vernon Walters, the deputy director. Gen. Walters has testified that he was "ordered" by Mr. Haldeman to inform Patrick Gray 3d, then acting FBI director, that unspecified CIA activities in Mexico might be uncovered if the five checks deposited in Bar-ker's bank account, and traced by the FBI, had been passed by a group of Republican fund-raisers in Texas through the Mexico City bank account of Manuel Ogarrio Deguerre, a retired lawyer.

Another of the White House transcripts released yesterday contains the audible portions of a second meeting between Mr. Nixon and Mr. Haldeman on June 23, following the session with the two CIA officials.

'Got the Picture' Mr. Haldeman told the President, the transcript shows, that he had instructed Gen. Walters to pass the message to Mr. Gray, his account. Following the August, 1972, news conference, the President continued to insist that he had not impeded the FBI's investigation of the Watergate bugging. At a session with reporters on Oct. 5, 1972, for example, he made the following remarks:

"I agreed with the amount of effort that was put into it. I wanted every lead carried out to the end because I wanted to be sure that no member of the White House staff and no man or woman in a position of major responsibility in the committee for re-election has anything to do with this kind of reprehensible activity."

During the morning meeting with Mr. Haldeman on the previous June 23, however, the transcript showed Mr. Nixon asking, "Well, what the hell, did Mitchell know about this?" "I think so," Mr. Haldeman re-

Mr. Haldeman then referred to Gordon Liddy, who had orchestrated the June 17 break-in, but who, at that time, had not been implicated in the matter and was still employed as counsel to the Finance Committee to Re-Elect the President.

Mr. Haldeman told the President of Liddy's involvement. which was not known publicly untll he was indicted with the burglars three months later. Liddy, he said, "was under pressure, apparently, to get more information. and as he got more pressure, he pushed the people harder to move

"Pressure from Mitchell?" the President inquired. "Apparently," Mr. Haldeman

"All right, fine. I understand it all," the President said. "We won't second-guess Mitchell and the rest. Thank God it wasn't Colson." Charles Colson was then the special counsel to the President. Mr. Haldeman, Mr. Mitchell, Colson and others were indicted by a federal grand jury in connection with the Watergate cover-up last March. The charges against Colson were later dropped when he pleaded guilty to a felony charge brought in the case of the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Mr. Haldeman and Mr. Mitchell have pleaded not guilty and are due to stand trial on Sept. 9. Mr. Haldeman has testified to his innocence in the matter, and told the Senate Watergate Committee last summer that he had instructed Gen. Walters on June 23 only to investigate the possibility of CIA involvement in Watergate. Bay of Pigs

The suggestion was made, he said, because Barker and some of the others arrested in the Democratic national headquarters had been active in the CIA's Cuban invasion plan in 1961 that met defeat at the Bay of Pigs. One of the five, James McCord ir, then the Nixon campaign security director, had served for 20 years as a security officer with the CIA

Gen. Walters told the committee that he did speak with Mr. Gray on June 23, the day of the three Nixon-Haldeman conversations made public yesterday, but only told him that it was the wish of the White House that the FBI "taper off" its investigation of the Mexican checks that Barker had deposited.

Three days later, the general testified, he called Mr. Gray back to report that none of the CIA's covert operations in Mexico would be compromised by a full-scale FBI inquiry into the origin of the checks. But Gen. Walters said that

Dean kept insisting that the CIA was involved in Watergate. Mr. Nixon's defense lawyers have repeatedly laid the responsibility for the genesis of the Watergate cover-up with Dean, who later

Mr. Nixon has said a number of times that he was unaware that the cover-up had touched the White House until March 21, 1973, when Dean warned him in a conversation in the Oval Office that a "cancer" was growing on the presidency.

Dean has charged that Mr. Nixon had some knowledge of the cover-up effort as early as Sept. 15, 1972, the day that Liddy, Barker and five others were indicted in the bugging case.

President's Rationale

The Bay of Pigs invasion, according to the three newly released transcripts, appeared to be central in the President's mind to the rationale for limiting the FBI's investigation. In instructing Mr. Haldeman on what to tell Mr. Helms and Gen. Walters, he remarked: When you get in-when you get in [intelligible] people, say 'Look, the problem is that this will open the whole, the whole Bay of Pigs thing, and the President just feels that ah, without going into the details—don't, don't lie to them to the extent to say there is no involvement, but just say this is a comedy of errors. One of those ultimately indicted man, "that will uncover a lot of things. You open that scab there's a hell of a lot of things and we just feel that it would be very detrimental to have this thing go any further."

Member of 'Plumbers'

Hunt had been a career CIA operative with major responsi-bility for the failure of the Bay of Pigs effort, and, after retiring from the agency, he became a member of the "plumbers," the White House investigation squad that broke into the office of Mr. Elisberg's psychiatrist.
The President, in a statement accompanying the three transcripts, noted that they contradicted his first major statement on Watergate on May 22, 1973. In that statement, Mr. Nixon declared that "at no time did I attempt, or did I authorize others to attempt, to implicate the CIA in the Watergate mat-

But, he maintained "It was certainly not my intent, nor my wish, that the investigation of the Watergate break-in or of related acts

Mr. Nixon conceded on May 22 that it then seemed that, "through whatever complex of individual motives and possible misunderstandings, there were apparently wide-ranging efforts to limit the investigation, or to concent the possible involvement of members of the administration and the campaign committees." "I was not aware of any such

Conflict With Testimony

Tapes May Pose Problems For White House Ex-Aides

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The edited transcripts of the Watergate tapes released yesterday by the White House appear to pose new legal problems for former Nixon administration officials H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and John Mitchell.

Although all have asserted their innocence in the Watergate cover-up, the new tapes indicate that they were involved in a plot to obstruct the FBI's probe of the June 17, 1972, break-in as early as six days after the burgiary.

Mr. Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Mr. Mitchell are among six former administration officials and Nixon campaign aides who are scheduled to stand trial in the cover-up case next month.

The transcripts portray Mr. Haldeman as being involved more deeply than the others in at-tempts to curtail the FBI probe, but all three men are mentioned specifically. The tapes also conflict with Mr. Haldeman's sworn testimony before the Senate Watergate committee last

Meany Predicts Ford Would Get Labor's Backing

CHICAGO, Aug. 6 (AP).~ George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, predicted yesterday that trade unions would support Vice-President Ford if he ascends to the presidency because of President Nixon's removal or resignation from office.

Mr. Nixon's preoccupation with House impeachment proceedings and his defense before a possible Senate trial are aggravating a bad economy, Mr. Meany said, and it would be better for the nation if Mr. Nixon resigned ment to run its course. "I don't think if the President resigns, it would be a shock to the nation," he said at a news conference. He said resignation may be a quicker road to curing the ills of inflation than impeachment because of what he described as a lack of confidence and a lack of integrity in the President. Asked if labor could get along with Mr. Ford, generally regarded as a conservative in thinking. Mr. Meany replied: "A conservative with integrity is far better than what we have today in the White House ... all I want to sec is the President go away.

Mr. Haldeman mentioned Elurlichman's role as he reviewed the President's approval for such a plan. The transcript shows the following dialogue:

Later, Mr. Haldeman spoke of the CIA turnoff," referring to use of that agency to intercept the FBI probe.

"I'm not going to get that involved. I'm [unintelligible]," the President replied. "No sir we don't want you Mr. Haldeman said.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger today withdrew his threat to resign unless his name was ared in a wiretapping matter. Acts to Sharply Limit House Amendments

By Richard L. Madden

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (NYT), The House Rules Committee sent a major campaign-financing bill to the House floor yesterday under ground rules that would sharply limit amendments.

The action, taken by voice vote. is expected to draw strong op-position from Republicans when the bill reaches the House floor, probably tomorrow.

By a party-line vote of 9 to 4, the Democratic-controlled Rules Committee defeated a Republican attempt to open the bill for all amendments from the floor. Such a procedure, the bill's sponsors had warned, could kill the mea-

Major Effort

The bill is regarded as a major effort by the House to curb the abuse of large corporate campaign contributions such as those brought to light in the Watergate investigations. It would sharply limit contributions and expenditures in federal election campaigns and would provide public funds from the existing $1 check-off on federal income tax returns to help finance presidential primary election campaigns and national party nomitating conventions. The bill also would establish a seven-member supervisory board to enforce the bill's provisions.

Under the ground rules proposed by Rep. Hays and partly modified by the Rules Committee, the House could consider amendments to the bill only dealing with the amounts of the proposed limits on contributions and expenditures, public financing, the composition of the supervisory board, whether congres-sional committees could veto the rules adopted by the board, and whether an endorser of a bank ioan to a campaign should be counted as a contributor.

The Senate passed its version of a campaign financing measure from the House. Senate-House conferees must reconcile the two

Resignation or Removal

There is authentic drama in President Nixen's personal admission of what the tapes released to Judge Sirica on the order of the Supreme Court proved: That he had called the FBI off its Watergate investigation, six days after the break-in, for political reasons as well as those of asserted national security. It has produced a profound effect upon the Congress that is well advanced in impeachment proceedings, influencing many of his strongest supporters to call for his resignation or removal from office.

The reasons for this impact are obvious enough. The statement and the tapes demonstrate beyond question that Mr. Nixon did make an effort, through use of his presidential authority, to obstruct justice-2 primary charge against him in the impeachment proceedings. More, he did conceal that fact from his advisers, his lawyers and the public: Indeed, he originally asserted quite the contrary. And the implication is very strong that his long battle to keep the evidence of the tapes from the courts, the Congress and the people was only incidentally a defense of executive privilege and confidentiality-in essence, it was an attempt to conceal information damaging to him personally. For many who sustained him. this undercuts the moral, legal and political motives which sustained them.

Mr. Nixon has termed his public statements, with the matters covered in the tapes of July 23, 1972, excluded or actually denied, a "serious act of omission for which I take full responsibility and which I deeply regret." He urges that this be viewed in perspective, against "the record, in its entirety." and insists that that record "does not justify the extreme step of impeachment and removal of a president."

But surely the President has not forgotten that the record, as it was available before the Supreme Court order requiring the production of the new tapes, had already mpelled the House Judiciary Committee, by a substantial majority, including Republicans, to charge him with three impeachable offenses: that he himself acknowledges that, on the record as it was known, "a House vote for impeachment is, as a practical matter, virtually a foregone conclusion." The new evidence can only strengthen that conclusion—and, as the reactions of his Senate supporters would indicate, extend it to the upper house. Should Mr. Nixon, then, become the first President of the United States to resign under fire? Or should he proceed through the constitutional process toward that conviction under impeachment which would be equally unprecedented, but which now assumes mounting inevitability? Quite apart from personal or party considerations, there are arguments in the national interest on both sides. Resignation may be less traumatic for the country than conviction by the Senate: the latter might set a firmer constitutional precedent.

To strike a balance between these concerns is by no means easy. But in this awesome political moment of truth for the republic, it has become painfully clear that on the record in its entirety," resignation or conviction on impeachment are the alternatives. As Rep. Charles Wiggins, Mr. Nixon's ablest defender in the Judiciary Committee, said on Tuesday. "with great reluctance and deep personal sorrow." that if Richard Nixon does not resign, his career of public service "must be terminated involuntarily." There are now no other valid choices for the na-

Moscow Breaks Berlin Agreement

1971, hailed as a landmark of detente, the Soviet Union made an explicit written commitment to assure and facilitate "unimpeded" West German civilian access from West Germany to isolated West Berlin, Thus supposedly was resolved an issue that had repeatedly brought East and West to the brink of war. Presumably no signatory would lightly violate this critical, high-visibility accord. Yet Moscow has now broken it by permitting East Germany to interfere physically with transit traffic. This is a deadly serious matter, calling into question the worth of Moscow's word and the depth of its interest in detente. If the Russians are prepared to ignore their own solemn treaty commitment in the most politically sensitive area of East-West relations, then we are in for hard times.

As usual in these situations, several explanations can be heard roundabout. One is that the West Germans are really at fault-for provoking the East by setting up a federal environmental office in West Berlin, which is formally an occupied city and not a constituent part of West Germany. It is so that-ignoring this important formality-Bonn did not ask its three Western allies' prior approval before announcing its intention to locate the environment office in the city. But the alijes' approval was subsequently given and the particular office unquestionably falls within the terms of the 1971 agreement, which allows Bonn to maintain and develop ties with West Berlin. In any event, if the Russians or East Germans do have an objection, the agreement compels them to express it by diplomacy. The Berlin agreement supposedly removed force as a legitimate way to conduct policy in the

By the four-power Berlin agreement of heart of Europe. What else is détente

A second explanation of the Soviet decision to see traffic impeded is that the Kremlin may be trying to intimidate Europe at a moment of the Continent's considerable economic and political distraction. Given the traditional postwar status of Berlin as the barometer of Soviet intentions, this has a certain plausibility. Moscow may believe that, with an economic storm gathering in the West as a result of the oil price increases and with Atlantic ties strained as a result of the October Mideast war, this is a good moment to give the West a shore. For all the hopeful words uttered recently about how the Cyprus crisis showed that NATO had been reknit, Europe is plainly in a poor position to shove back.

For Americans, the most troubling possible explanation of Soviet policy is that the Kremlin may be trying to exploit the President's own personal distraction. To be sure, less than a month ago in the Moscow summit communique, Mr. Nixon and Mr. Brezhnev registered their "profound satisfaction" at European trends and pledged again the "strict and consistent implementation" of the 1971 Berlin agreement. But these phrases must be measured against the fact of interrupted Berlin access. The Nixon administration has responded by joining with Britain and France in a statement holding Moscow responsible for the interruption and by halting talks with East Germany on the establishment of bilateral relations. It is unpleasant but necessary to confront the possibility that a harsher reaction may yet be required if the East Germans continue their interference with access to Berlin.

Korean 'Security'

There can be no argument with the administration's contention that the security of South Korea is integrally related to the security of Japan and the whole military balance in East Asia. But the legitimate question has been raised as to whether the repressive policies of President Chung Hee Park are in fact promoting that securityor, alternatively, weakening South Korea's ability to withstand subversion or overt military attack from the North.

Prof. Edwin O. Reischauer of Harvard, a former U.S. ambassador to Japan, has argued persuasively before subcommittees of the House Foreign Relations Committee that the widespread popular unrest provoked by President Park's brutal authoritarianism is a destabilizing force that may only invite the restive North Koreans to seize the moment for their own hostile designs.

U.S. officials-up to and including Secretary of State Kissinger-make no attempt to justify the current crackdown on internal dissent on which President Park is embarked without apparent regard for the domestic or international consequences. But, these officials complain, the South Korean regime is consistently turning deaf ears to all outside advice and warnings. Under such circumstances, the U.S. administration would do well to reconsider whether it has expressed its concerns to Seoul in strong enough terms.

Last year Japan made its point in a dispute with the Park regime by cutting off all economic aid for four months. The United States is committed to a long-term military modernization effort that has already fallen behind schedule: but if President Park is unwilling to listen to any other language. perhaps he would be impressed if Congress moved to cut back the administration's requested $241.5-million security assistance

The United States should not be in the business of molding other societies to suit its own convenience. But neither should it continue the flow of military support to regimes which are, by their own iil-considered actions, undermining the security which that support is designed to provide.

Uganda's Continuing 'Reign of Terror'

By Hal Sheets

WASHINGTON.—In July, 1971, two Americans were brutally murdered and their bodies burned by Ugandan Army officers in a remote southern province. Nicholas Stroh, a 33-year-old freelance journalist, and Robert Siedle, 46, lecturer at Makerere University, had been attempting to investi-gate reports of mass executions at Mbarara barracks. According to witnesses, now in exile from Uganda, these last words were uttered: "You may kill us. but someday you'll answer for this."

Three years and 90,000 deaths later, there has been no answer, by international action, to the policy of mass murder by the government of Gen. Idi Amin.

The killing, initially following racial and ethnic lines but expanded to include anyone who displeases the mercurial Gen. Amin, began scarcely a month after he overthrew the regime of President Milton Obote in January, 1971.

Gen. Amin immediately began series of systematic purges of the judiciary, the civil service, the police, and the military. Within five months, he had abolished the parliament, ended all political activity and invested the military with extraordinary powers of arrest, detention and summary execution.

A recent report by the Inter-national Commission of Jurists on violations of human rights in Uganda described the situation as a "reign of terror." Though detailed figures are a state secret, and almost impossible to calculate, most diplomatic observers estimate that more than 90,000 have been killed since Gen. Amin took power. The has struck nearly every tribe in every region of the country, including more than 50,000 people from ethnic groups formerly identified with the Obote regime and several thousand from Gen. Amin's own tribe, the Kakwa.

The Methods

According to witnesses, the methods used in the killings match the horror of the numbers. There are reports that entire villages were slain by machinegun and that the bodies were fed to crocodiles in the Nile River or carried to mass graves in the bush. Some victims have been made to kill each other with hammers or to consume their own flesh until they have bled to death. There are numerous accounts of death by sexual abuse and mutilation as well as dis-memberment of live people.

Known to the world largely for his persecution and expulsion of 60,000 Asians in 1972, and his telegrams to Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim of the United Nations praising Hitler's genocide of European Jews, Gen. Amin has been treated as an almost comic figure by the international community. Not even the murder of Africans has stirred other African countries to condemn the regime. In the sheer arbitrariness of the killings, however, United States officials find few parallels. He's totally mad," said one former United States diplomat, "and the billing is no more expiicable than Stalin's mass purges. It is an African 'Guler'.'

The only attempt to raise the issue of human-rights violations in Uganda at the United Nations failed to gain support during the 1972 session of the Subcommission on the Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities. The subcommission, a group of 26 experts selected on a geographical basis, is charged with certifying to the Commission on Human Rights whether or not a persistent pattern of gross violations of human rights exists.

Paralyzed Though United Kingdom experts on human rights raised the issue of the persecution of the Ugandan Asians during the 1972 session, the subcommission soon became paralyzed by a series of procedural debates. Neither that issue nor the killing of Africans was ever discussed in substance or forwarded to the full commission. Not surprisingly, the discussion was impeded by the representatives from the Soviet Union, Greece, and Brazil, countries that have been noted for their own human-rights violations. Although the killings continue, human-rights specialists who follow the issue at the United Nations in New York and in Geneva see little hope of the issue being raised at the uncoming session. in February. Though the widely respected International Commission of Jurists has filed its formal report to the United Nations detailing the situation in Uganda, one source familiar with the operation of the Human Rights Commission observed, "It could take as long as five years to make a decision to even consider the ICJ report.

Meanwhile, Uganda is receiving military assistance from the So-viet Union. Libya, Egypt and Algeria. Gen. Amin has been given MIGs, heavy tanks, armored personnel carriers and 2 wide assortment of small arms. There does not seem to be any hope that the United States gov-ernment, though well aware of Gen. Amin's savagery, will raise the rights issue. United States companies purchased in 1973 some per cent of the total exports of Uganda, including nearly $100 million in coffee, but State Department officials quickly discount any plans for an embargo to dissociate the United States from the Amin regime, Though the United States closed sources close to that decision say it was more in response to an acrimonious telegram from Gen. Amin wishing President Nixon "a speedy recovery" from Watergate than as an act of principle. Washington has done nothing to place the Ugandan case on the agenda of the Human Rights Commission or even to condemn publicly the killings. Nearly 30 years after the horAuschwitz and Treblinks were exposed to the world, the Ugandan case and others, such as genocide in neighboring Burundi, demonstrate that human rights continues to be a minor issue in international politics. Nearly 30 years after the founding of the United Nations, there is still no mechanism to protect citizens from the arbitrary madness of governments. Mass murits embassy in Uganda in 1973, der in Uganda and elsewhere remains, for the United Nations and the United States government, a distant grief at best.

THENS-Democracy is still a fragile plant in post-junta Greece but every day that passes helps strengthen its shaky stalk. The strong-man Premier, Constantine Caramanlis, has found himself enormously popular on returning from 11 years of voluntary exile in France. Moreover, there is some evidence that the customarily volatile Greeks have been matured politically by their sad experience of the past decade -first a rabble-rousing, selfparalyzed parliamentary regime;

But to nourish the abrupt return to democratic rule, Greece needs two basic things. First of all, it requires at least the start of a serious Cyprus negotiation that would terminate Turkish military action. Should Ankara continue to soup up tension, the results could be disastrous in this emotionally charged land which can, on occasion, summon up &

Already there is not only constantly heightening friction between Cypriot Greeks and Turks but almost as savage a quarre between armed bands of proand anti-Makarios Greeks. tough general has been sent to Cyprus by Athens to discipline these factions and also to take a firm hold on pro-junta officers still there. At all odds it is desirable that Cyprus avoid formal partitionand the fate of Ireland with permanent religious divisions and instead seek a demilitarized, wholly independent future. Obviously this would require revision

He has also included anti-junta resistance leaders in his cabinet to win left-wing support. The second thing required by Greece's neo-democracy is a serious renewal of the former friendship with the United States, something very much desired by Caramanlis. From a Greek point of view these are the two immediate questions that must be faced: Turkey (which involves Cyprus) and the United States. The first, of course, is infinitely more urgent. But if diplomacy wins against passion and détente starts to set in, the problem of the American relationship might in the long run prove equally vital.

The resolution, which now goes to the Senate, stemmed from Turkey's decision five weeks ago to lift a ban on poppy-growing in time to plant fall crops.

Two years ago, the United States agreed to pay Turkey $35.7 million in exchange for that government's ban on the planting and harvesting of poppies in the fall of 1972. ## 12 Nations Agree in Principle to Share Oil in the Event of a New Crisis

By Murrey Marder

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (WF), —An agreement in principle for emergency sharing of oil from all sources if there is a new threat to supplies has been reached by the major oil-consuming nations, the State Department said vesterday.

Much of the chaos, and the four-fold explosion of prices caused by the Arab oil embargo last winter, could have been avoided by such an agreement, an official said.

Twelwe nations now have reached "substantial agreement" at a senior official level "on the basis on which the group would act in the event of a new oil interruption," said Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for economic and business

Approach Worked Out in Brussels

The new approach was worked out in Brussels during the last six months by the Emergy

Coordinating Group (ECG) estab-lished by the Washington energy conference last February.

Participants in the group are the United States, Canada, Britain, Norway, West Germany, Denmark, Italy, the Netherlands, Belgium, Ireland, Luxembourg and Japan. The proposals, after some further work, will await approval at the cabinet levels of government, in September or officials hope France will join the cooperative oil program later.

October. Prance balked at joining the energy group, but U.S.

Although many American sperialists expressed doubt in February that the United States ever would agree to share its domestic oil supplies, the proposal does inbasis" from both imported and domestic supplies in an emergency, Mr. Enders said. There would be however, a "weighted voling" arrangement if "extraordinary reasons' were invoked in opposition to automatic sharing of oil in a crisis.

Details of amounts of oil to be shared, and many other specifics of the plan, are being withheld until governments can act on the

The 12 nations involved con-sume about 38 million barrels of oil a day, it was said. They proday themselves, leaving a gap of about 25 million barrels. Arab oil embargo last winter, however, only cut off about 10 per cent of the world supply, a U.S. official noted.

At present, newsmen were told at the State Department, there is "a significant surplus," on the order of two to three million barrels of oil a day, on the international market, with the producers making stremuous efforte to maintain high prices.

The explosions apparently were in retaliation for the bombing of a passenger train south of Bologna Sunday in which 12 persons were killed and 48 injured.

A neo-Fascist terrorist group. Ordine Nero (the black order). has claimed responsibility for the blast. The MSI condemned the train bombing. Officials said that the government was preparing legislation which would send suspected terrorists away from their home bases into forced exile in other parts of Italy. That method is currently used in an attempt to keep the Sicilian Mafia under control.

Police, meanwhile, said they found 18 kilos of high explosives placed between a road bridge and a railway line only 12 miles from the tunnel in which the bombing of the train occurred Sunday. Investigators said that the explosive charge, apparently laid in the last few days, was enough to blow up both the railway and the oridge. But they found no trace of a detonating device. suggesting that those responsible were surprised while planting the charge or that they had intended to return later to finish their

Off the Beaten Track With Weill, Poulenc

By David Stevens

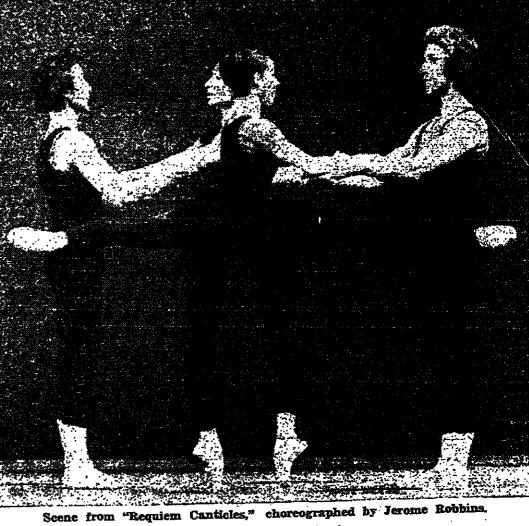

MUNICH (THT).—The Munich Festival no longer depends as exclusively as it used to on its trinity of Mozart, Wagner and Strauss, who were missing from this year's list of new productions. Instead, there were bracing injections of Weill, Poulenc and Stravinsky, with works by Verdi and Beethoven to represent the more traditional repertory.

Farthest off the beaten track was the pairing of Kurt Weill's "Mahagonny Songspiel" with Francis Poulenc's "Les Mamelles de Tirésias"-a double-bill that united two composers of the same vintage but different soil in two operatic reflections of the anti-romantic spirit of the twentles, and two composers with a special feeling for their poets, respectively Brecht and Apolli-

It was Poulenc who came off the better, mainly because "Mamelles" is an integral, if completely zany, piece of musical theater. Apollinaire's 1917 drame surrealiste—Theresia liberates herself from her breasts and becomes a man, Tirésias, while her husband joins in the game and starts producing children by the tens of thousands, just to mention the main line of the "plot" is an uncanny anticipation of the serious nonsense of the 1920s, and it was precisely and wittly captured by the composer, although he did not get around to it until almost 30 years later. The whole thing has a decidedly Gallic sparkle, and the achievement of the Munich production was to preserve that, although in translation—the sparkle sometimes seemed to be that of Deutsche Sekt rather than French champagne.

The designer, Ruodi Barth, set the tone at the beginning with a stage-filling portrait of a bearded Mona Lisa, and thereafter the action took place around and through a succession of imitation art works that descended from and rose into the flies, most of them evoking an atmosphere of Dufy, Braque and the like. The large and excellent cast was headed by Hildegard Uhrmacher as the emancipated wife and Barry McDaniel, hilarious in drag and falsetto—and tastefully robed by Liselotte Erler -as the extraordinarily fecund husband.

Bohumil Herlischka, who staged both works, had his work cut out for him in the early Brecht-Welli collaboration. The "Mahagonny Songspiel" (alias "Das Kleine Mahagonny") is really nothing but a setting of a group of Brecht's poems with a story line hastily imposed to qualify for a commission for a 1927 festival of contemporary music in Baden-Baden. The music and the rudimentary story of the founding of the imaginary paradise-hell city of Mahagonny are understandable now only as the nucleus of what later became the opera on the same theme, and Heriischka presumed a knowledge of the opera in devising a staging for his two women and four men that was doubtless more elaborate than the original

The main element in Barth's set was a huge tractor-trailer that opened up to reveal a honkytonk baroque interior, with flashing lights, portable alter and other paraphernalia, that provided an odd counterpoint to the decorative rococo of the tiny Cuvillies Theater. Marek Janowski and members of the Munich Philharmonic adapted themselves as adroitly to Weill's tough cabaret manner as they did to Poulenc's quicksilver idiom.

Stravinsky, and baliet, were represented in the festival program with a triple-bill that included Balanchine's "Apollo" and Glen Tetley's version of "The Rite of Spring." Its centerpiece, contrasting dramatically with these two much earlier scores; was Jerome Robbins's recent choreography for the composer's late "Requiem Canticles," his taut, death-embracing setting of parts of the requiem mass. The ballet was the closing work in the New York City Ballet's extraordinary Stravinsky week in 1972, and it is one of the choreographer's best-a finely sculpted ritual for dances that combines stark formal movements interrupted by flurries of strange hand gestures. The program is both a tribute to and an excellent survey of the composer's importance to ballet, and the Munich troupe acquit-The festival was also something of a Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau festival. The baritone sang the title part in a new production of Verdi's "Falstaff," gave a lieder program, sang in Rossini's "Petite Messe Solennelle" and then sang the minuscule role of Don Fernando in the new and unfortunate staging of "Fidelic." It would be going a hit too far to say his appearance rescued the production, but his arrival for the final scene seemed to be the signal for the only really satisfying part of the evening. With his finely calculated stage presence and mean-ingful enunciation of his lines, he proved again that there is no such thing as a minor role for a major singer.

A number of fine singers doing their best-Ingrid Bjoner as Leonore, James King as Florestan, Leif Roar as Pizarro, Franz Crass as Rocco seemed lost in this staging. Reigh Kokai provided an unadorned white set that left the stage wide open, but Michael Geliot's staging failed to fill it and his attempts to do so scemed to be nothing but a succession of banalities, with the singers either left to their own devices or saddled with fussy and pointless activity.

But the Eavarian State Opera has a handsome repertory to draw on at festival time, as exemplified by the "Don Giovanni" that closed the festival, staged by Gänther Rennert with an eye on its opera buffa elements, richly designed and costumed by Jürgen Rose, solidly conducted by Wolfgang Sawallisch, and superbly sung by a cast headed by Rug-gero Raimond's arrogantly virile Don and Margaret Price's regal

Entertainment lu New York

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (IHT).— This is how The New York Times critics rate new films; "Escape to Nowhere" is an impressive debut for French director Claude Pinoteau, says Nora Sayre, praising the film as a "celebration of magically swift wits." Lino Ventura plays a French physicist, kidnapped twice in 16 years—once by the Russians, once by the Britishand the Russians are going to kill him unless he can arrange to be traded for a Russian spy, Escape to Nowhere" is says Sayre, "no ordinary thriller, due to the depth of the characterization of the physicist and the superb performance of Lino Ventura... Throughout, the suspense is devastating, not only because of the fine acting but thanks to the soundtrack and a brilliant use of music." Lea Genn, Lea Massari and all the others are "sensitively cast," and there's a "loving use of locations, particularly of the French countryside-seen through the eyes of bumpkin and with Jean Debucourt as the suave Parisian attorney. The versatile G and as resourceful in recounting this macabre farce of lackluster provincial life as in his salon comedies and fanciful historical vignettes. Taking a sordid, smalltown murder case-that of & gruff but likable peasant who stabs his wife to death with a kitchen knife in the nick of time she has just sprinkled rat poison in his wine)-Guitry turns the grim material into a hilarious harlequinade, illuminating the dark background with sparkling dialogue and acute observation of character. Simon and Debucourt are superb as the stars, and the supporting cast is strong, with Germaine Reuver contributing a realistic, slice-of-life account of the hated wife, with Pauline Carton allotted a courtroom turn, with Jeanne Fusier-Gir, another of the author's favorites, as the gentle flower vencor, and with the young Louis de Punès giving evidence of his budding comic talents in a brief bit.

In the opinion of Jean-Luc Godard there are two sorts of directors: those who prepare their films as fully as possible and those who don't know exactly what they are going to do before the shooting starts.

Jacques Rivette is a member of the second school, "When we began our film, 'Out 1: Spectre' (which despite its English title is in French and runs for four hours at the Seine Studio, not a line of the scenario had been written, He then shot 30 hours of film and delivered a movie that lasted for 12 hours and 40 minutes which was screened three years ago at the Le Havre Maison de la Culture over a weekend). This proved too much for any audience and he has cut the present version from it. It is also rough on spectators.

The Rivette scheme was to round up some actors and nonactors and to have them improvise situations before the camera. The alleged springboard for these "improvisations" is Baizac's "Histoire des Treize," but the film has no more to do with the famous novel about a secret society of wealthy dandles than Mickey Mouse has to do with "Hamlet."

Present-day Paris is the scene and this setting has been rather. skillfully captured, as it was in Rivette's earlier "Paris Nous Appartient." But in lieu of fresh

LONDON: Brass Bands Turn Up At Proms for the First Time

By Henry Pleasants

LONDON, Aug. 6 (JHT).—It is a reflection of the intense parochialism of British musical life that the appearance at the Proms on Saturday night of the Black Dyke Milks and the Grimethorpe Colliery Brass Bands marked the first time in the 80-year history of the Proms that brass bands have been invited to participate.

They are among the musical glories of Great Britain. There are literally thousands of them, usually associated with mills, collieries and factories, with the heaviest concentration in Yorkshire and Lancashire. An annual competitive festival at Royal Albert Hall in October is a matter of great interest to many thousands in the respective communities. The institution has its own periodical, The British Bandsman, and the technical and interpretive standard of the best bands is estonishingly high. That none of all this draws the slightest attention or recognition from the music critics is due primarily to the fact that very little music of enduring quality has been written specifically for this kind of band, its instruments being, with the exception of the trombone. of the conical bore type invented and developed by the Sax family in Paris in the mid-19th century, and never accepted as suitable for the symphony orchestra. As a consequence, the brass band (usually 24 pieces) is heavily dependent on transcriptions and arrangements from the symphonic and opera and operetta repertoire. Transcription and arrangements are had words in the vocabulary of music criticism. The absence of strings and even of reeds is a further disqualifying consideration.

Not surprisingly—and unfortunately—Saturday night's offerings were confined to original works for brass band by Elgar, Hoist, Grainger and Harrison Bitwistle, the latter represented by a dour and dire "Grimethorpe Arla," commissioned by the Grimethorpe Colliery Band last year.

This was all very splendidly played by the massed bands under the direction of Grimethorpe's accomplished conductor. Elgar Howarth, but none of it was satisfacturily idiomatic. For that we had to wait for the encore, an arrangement of John Bull's "Queen's Hunt." This was the real thing, and it had to be repeated not once, but twice.

The predilections that led Mr. Howarth to commission a work by Birtwistle were confirmed in his reappearance at the Roundhouse, last night, to conduct Luciano Berio's "Recital I (for Cathy)." Cathy Berberian was on hand to act it and sing it with the London Sinfonietta, with which she has already recorded it for RCA. It was a stunning performance of a remarkable work, in which a singer who seems to have lost her wits but not her voice, offers a fragmented delivery of her extensive repertoire. The broable with this piece is that Miss Berberian sings so superbly in a variety of styles that one ends by resenting the fragmentation.

Conventional savings accounts here now yield 9.5 per cent, although the yields on accounts with building societies can be somewhat higher because the societies pay the basic taxes incurred by the depositors on their interest yields.

In the 12 months through June, the retail price index in Britain rose by a record 16.5 per cent. Thus, a saver with a conventional account would have suifered a loss of 7 per cent in the purchasing power of his savings. Under the new government program, savers would incur no losses in purchasing power, regardless of the degree of increase in the price index.

Japanese Investment in U.S. Seen Hitting $7 Billion by '80

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (NYT),- ment in this country will reach A comprehensive study commissioned by the Japanese government has found that the climate for Japanese investment in the United States is "stable and benign" and forecasts that the level of direct Japanese invest-

$6 billion to $7 billion by 1980. The report says that Japan is entering a fundamentally new economic development "in which the Japanese homeland will be less exclusively a production center and will begin to function as the headquarters of a global economic system.

"Foreign investment will be the principal vehicle for this transition," the report says, and will reflect, among other things, "the need to shift a part of production offshore in response to growing domestic shortages, a growing trade surplus, and protectionist pressures in principal oversess markets."

The report was drawn up by Boston Counsulting Group, 2 management consulting organization tion, after extensive research in all 50 states. Interviews were conducted with key government officials, businessmen, scholars, community leaders and a variety of other representative and influential persons.

The report contains warnings of areas of potential friction that could have significant political repercussions, citing "investments in Japanese tourism-based realestate activities, particularly by Hawail, the West Coast and possibly Alaska, and local overconcentrations of Japanese activity. owing to the tendency of Japanese businesses to 'cluster.'" But it says that these problems can be held "within manageable bounds through skillful planning."

A basic finding is that direct Japanese investment in the Unitrd States, estimated at $81 million in March, 1973, by the U.S. government, will rise steeply to $6 billion to $7 billion within the next six years, exclusive of prirate securities purchases, projected at $1,5 billion to $2 billion, and banking assets of $12 billion to $16 billion.

Major categories of investment are divided into four, with the largest amount-$2.7 billion-foreseen in export substitution manufacturing.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Sumitomo in Saudi Steel Venture

Sumitomo Metal Industries, a Japanese steelmaker, has agreed to participate in a $75 million steel pipe fabricating project in Saudi Arabia. Plans call for Sumitomo Metal and Sumitomo Shoji Kaishaa, a trading firm, to establish early next year a joint venture to be called National Pipe Co. with Saudi Arabia's Alireza group of companies. The venture would be owned 51 per cent by Saudi Arabian interests, 33 per cent by Sumitomo Metal and 16 per cent by Sumitomo Shoji. Plans call for production facilities capable of initially turning out 24,000 metric tons of spiral steel pipes a year to be built at Ad Damman, an industrial zone on the Persian Gulf coast. Startup is scheduled for 1976. Capacity would eventually be boosted to 80,000 tons of pipes a year. The pipes will be used to transport oil. Somitomo officials say it has not been decided yet how the new venture will be financed, but they acknowledge that consideration is being given to securing a substantial portion of the needed funds in Saudi Arabia.

Heineken of the Netherlands and Whitbread of Britain have acquired a share in the brewery group Birra Dreher, Italy's second largest beer concern with a 30 per cent share of the market. Hemeken officials say it is too early to state percentages of the interests acquired, but add that the interests held by Hemeken and Whitbread together constitute a majority. Financial details of the transaction were not disclosed.

U.S. Eases Terms of GE Stock Sale The U.S. Justice Department will not require

General Electric to divest itself of its holdings Honeywell stock as quickly as was originally demanded. GE owns about 1.5 million shares of Honeywell, received in payment for the 1970 sale of its electronic data processing business to Honeywell. Under a schedule set up by the government, GE was to have sold 412,000 Honeywell shares by the end of this year, half of the remaining stock by mid-1976 and the remainder by mid-1978. GE has already sold more than one million Honeywell shares since August 1970. But the government now says GE can sell the remaining shares any time it chooses up to mid-1978. The terms were changed at GE's request because of the possible effect of divestiture by the two interim dates on the value of Honeywell stock and the possible impact of that on Honeywell's competitive position."

He said interest rates would probably not come down unless the inflation rate does but might decline if there is a substantial reduction in federal spending.

"For a time, we should be prepared to tolerate a slower rate of economic growth and a higher rate of inemployment than any of us would like," he said. Three words that can make a substantial difference to a Portfolia Manager, Trader, or an Investor. Obviously if you can earn $20,000 on an investment of $50,000 or a 40% return on investment you are doing considerably better than someone who is carning $20,000 on a $100,000 investment—WHILE AT ALL TIMES THE POTENTIAL RISKS AND REWARDS ARE IDENTICAL. Because of the variations in margin requirements on spreading and naked selling transactions between the Chicago Board Options Exchange (C.B.O.E.) and other exchanges it is possible to achieve SUBSTANTIALLY GREATER R.O.I. by utilizing C.B.O.E. margins.

Celebrityhood may have nothing to do with quality; it consists, to paraphrase Daniel Boorstin, in merely being known Here then are poets and clods, the wondrously innocent and the devious the quick and the dead. In himself being open—and by that very nature, vulnerable—to all his subjects. Diehl reveals. And that's what good interviewing is all about. It makes for a cockeyed kind of morality play,

Consider the cases of Henry Miller, whose reflections open the book, and S. I. Hayakawa, whose pronunciamentos come near the end:

Miller: "We always look for some Hitler, some devil to blame. They are not the cause, but the result. There are the quick and the dead; most of us are dead."

Hayakawa (referring to the young dissidents at San Francisco State, during the campus disturbances in the 1960s): "They violated the conventions of everyday life. The average citizen confronted by this does not know. what the hell to do. The silentmajority doesn't know what to do. The basic assumptions by which civilized society operates were just being destroyed. This is exactly what Hitler did with his Brownshirts."

("The silent majority," says an educator sympathetically. It is, indeed, revelatory. Memories of Pastor Niemoeller's reflections concerning the silent ones, during Hitler's time, are evoked.)

Miller: "I think the new revohation will come from the young, has to come from the young. But the young are still unable to formulate the nature of the new society. Over the centuries, we have tried every possible kind of gov-ernment—except the poetic one."

Hayakawa (in explaining the murders of the four students at Kent State): "This comes exactly from that elitism . . . when they start tearing up a town or offending people's sensibilities, there's just got to be trouble."

(Is it possible that the educator doesn't know that Kent State students are primarily of bluecollar families? Is it possible that he hasn't even glanced through

A player who bids a suit twice can be expected to hold six cards at least, so West and North both scraped up a raise for their partners with a doubleton honor. This should have ended the auction, but West produced a greedy double, relying on his four trumps and his side's presumed owner-ship of the balance of strength. West had nine high-card points opposite an opening bid.

The diagram shows that South has one black suit loser, and one sure loser in each red suit. He can afford to lose one further trick in the red suits, but not two. A diamond ruff in the dommy is an obvious prospect, but West did well by leading the space nine. As the cards lie, South would have done best to duck in dummy. but he had to allow for the possibility that West held the spade ace. He should have recognized that dummy's long club suit was not a threat: South was marked with six spades and a few red cards, so he could hardly have as many as three clubs. ## Yeager Homer Beats Reds

-Catcher Steve Yeager's first career grand-slam homer carried the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 5-3 victory over Cincinnati last night and pushed their lead over the Reds in the National League West to 7 1/2 games.

Yeager lined a Don Gullett pitch into the Dodger bullpen in left field in the seventh inning to put the Dodgers in front, 6-2. George Foster's homer with Tony Perez aboard in the top of the seventh had ided the score for Cincinnati.

A crowd of 45,55? at Dodger Stadium saw the Dodgers reel off their eighth straight victory and best the defending division champion Reds for the ninth time in 10 meetings this season.

Dodger southpaw Doug Rau pitched seven innings, giving up five hits and two runs, to record his 11th victory in 17 decisions. Guilett, who was tagged for Jimmy Wynn's 25th homer, with a man on in the first inning, dropped to 13-8. Wynn's blast was the first homer off Gullett in his last eight starts. Reliever Mike Marshall tied a Dodger record set by Bob Miller in 1964 by appearing in his 74th game of the season Marshall went the final two innings, allowing one run and recording his 17th save.

Cards 2, Phils 2 At St. Louis, Joe Torre singled off the leftfield well with the bases loaded in the 18th inning to give the Cardinals a 3-2 victory over Philadelphia. Ted Sizemore doubled to lead off the imping and Bake McBride was intentionally walked. Catcher Bob Boone tried a pickoff play at second base, and his throw sailed into centerfield, allowing both runners to advance. Ted Simmons was intentionally walked by Gene Garber to load the bases for Torre's hit

The first-place Cardinals, taking three of four games from the Phillies, moved into a two-game lead over Philadelphia in the National League East.

Astros 7. Giants 2

At San Francisco, Greg Gross, a leading candidate for National League rookie of the year honors, hit five singles, scored a run, drove one in and stole a base in leading Houston to a 7-2 victory over the Giants Don Wilson, with help from Ken Forsch for the final 1 2/3 innings, gained his eighth victory in 16 decisions. Wilson also doubled and singled twice and Roger Metzger had Braves 9, Padres 7 At San Diego, Henry Aaron singled in pinch-runner Leo Foster in the ninth inning to hreak a 7-7 tie and Dusty Baker's sacrifice fly produced an insurance tally as Atlanta outlasted the Padres, 9-7.

Rangers 13, White Sox 8 At Chicago, Cesar Tovar scored the first run after a walk and drove in the last two with a bases-loaded single in a six-run first inning to lead Texas to a 13-8 victory over the White Sox. The Rangers sent 11 men to the plate in the first. Singles by Mike Har-grove and Jim Spencer scored Tovar and Jeff Burroughs, who had walked. Toby Harrah singled to score Hargrove and, after Dave Nelson was hit by a pitch, Jim Sundberg walked to force in a run and leave the bases loaded for Tovar's single.

Yanks 8, Red Sox 0 At New York, Rudy May allowed only two hits as the Yankees scored an 8-0 victory over Boston Thurman Munson and Roy White homered and Jim Mason drove in three runs with a triple and a Rico Petrocelli's single was just beyond the reach of shortstop Mason with two out in the fourth inning for the first hit off May and, after retiring 12 straight batters following a hit batsmen in the fifth, Tommy Harper singled in the ninth.

A's 2, Twins 1 Twins 4, A's 3

At Blocmington Minn, the Twins got to starter Dave Hamilton for three runs in the fourth inning and held on for a 4-3 victory over Oakland to split a doubleheader. The A's won the opener, 2-1, on Reggie Jackson's eighth-inning solo homer.

In the nightcap, the Twins scored on a walk, singles by Steve Brann, Jerry Terrell and Rod Carew and Eric Soderholm's sacrifice fly in the fourth and added the clincher in the fifth when Craig Kusick singled in Harmon Killebrew, who had

France Loses Coach

PARIS, Aug. 6 (Reuters).-Coach Stefan Kovacs, hired by France year ago to lift the country out of its soccer doldrums, was notified today that he must return home to Romania. Romanian sports officials informed him he was required in Romania to assist in coaching there. Kovacs, at present manager of the French national team, had been fearing such a call since early last month, when he first learned that Romania might withdraw its permission to him to coach abroad. He said he had hoped Romania would allow him to stay in France, and said before learning of the decision: "This uncertainty is terrible. I haven't had a moment's joy for a month." Kovacs was a successful club coach when he managed European champions Alax of Amsterdam. He left that post to take over the French national team, one of the weakest in Europe. Since his arrival.

the French have shown signs of revival, playing Kovacs's stlye of Pernand Sastre, president of the French Football Federation, said Kovacs's departure was deeply regretted. He said that Kovacs was under contract to the French federation for three seasons, the last two subject to permission for him to stay in France by Romanian sports authorities. Sastre said he believed the Romanian decision resulted from *Franco-Romanian difficulties* but did not make clear whether he was referring to sports or political relations.

Griese, Hadl Join NFL Teams

Players' Strike Is Hit by Defections

By Sam Goldaper

NEW YORK, Aug. 8 (NYT) .--The striking National Football League Players' Association suffered a setback vesterday when Terry Bradshaw, Bob Griese and John Hadl, all top-name quarterbacks, broke ranks and showed up at a training camp on the eve of the resumption of negotiations, An NFL Management Council spokesman, who keeps tally of returning striking players, glecfully said: "We have had better days when more players returned, but today was our biggest for name players reporting in." His reference was not only to the quarterbacks, but also to Joe Scibelli, the co-captain and guard of the Los Angeles Rams, and his teammate, Jack Snow a wide receiver. Also to Coy Bacon, the San Diego Chargers' starting defensive tackle, and Cornell Green, the Dallas Cowboys' safety. Terry Bledsoe, the spokesman for the management council, said 328 established players, including 100 starters, were now in the training camps of the 26 NFL teams.

But all was not on the plus side for the NFL owners. The Jets' camp lost two when John Ebersole and Rob Spicer, a pair of linebackers who had been in Griese, Bradshaw and Hadi all played for teams that won division championships last season, Griese led the Miami Dolphins to a Super Bowl victory, Bradshaw started nine games for Pittsburgh and the Steelers won eight, and Hadl paced the Rams to a 12-2 won-lost record.

Roger Staubach, the Cowboys' No. 1 quarterback, reported to camp Sunday night.

Bradshaw said he went through several sleepless nights before he made his decision to report to the Steeler camp at St. Vincent's College, Latrobe, Pa. "This was no overnight decision," he said in Latrobe. "I've given it a lot of thought. I've had some sleepless nights. But now that I've made my decision, nothing is going to change it. I stand with the players' association, but this is a personal thing with me," He did not elaborate,

Despite the pessimistic talk, Ed Garvey, executive director of the players' association, said he was hopeful that a new contract could be negotiated in the wake of the weekend's activities, Garvey said the owners had put "a lot of pressure on the players to report to camp but when they get word about our meeting here Sunday, I think they are going to come to the table and bargain in good faith.

"When they hear the reports, they will have to realize how long the strike could last."

About 60 players, including the team representatives from every club except Dallas, met in Washington for five hours and voted unanimously to retain their strong stand egainst the owners. Garvey said John Niland, the Dallas representative, was not present because he missed his plane.

Presidential Teeth

By Russell Baker

about American politics and teeth is correct. President Nixon is headed for an unhappy fate. The clue that leads me to this conclusion is buried in one of those asides to Haldeman or Ehrlichman recorded in the 35 White House tapes. In it the President refers to some painful dentistry he is undergoing and notes with apparent dread that he has another dental appointment ahead that day. Now there is nothing out of the ordinary in a man's having dental problems at the age of 60, if he i still afflicted with teeth at that age but it is an ill omen when that man is a

People who have watched presidential politics in modern times will surely have observed that teeth have become the very essence of presidential character. American voters, for whatever reason, seem to demand vast acreage of sturdy chamel in their presidents, much as airlines do in

As a general rule, you can judge a man's chances of becoming president by comparing the magnificence of his dental dis-play with that of his competitors. The Kennedys-half men and half teeth-always make formidable candidates. Indeed, Scn. Edward Kennedy's teeth, when fully displayed in the presidential manner, are so superior to any other in the Democratic party that most Democrats think it useless to run against him.

Moreover, the record shows that modern presidents without dazzling teeth invariably end badly. Witness the decline of Harry Truman's following in the early 1950s and the destruction of Lyndon Johnson.

In comparison, Franklin Roose-Dwight Eisenhower and John Kennedy had teeth that could stun a street crowd six blocks away and popularity polls

This association between teeth and government skills does not seem to occur until the time of Theodore Roosevelt. A portrait of Washington, Jefferson or Lincoln in the modern presidential style-mouth agape from molar to molar with quantities of gum tissue exposed to forestall rumor of periodontal breakdown-would strike most of us as grotesque. Perhaps our forefathers, more familiar with horses than we are,

WASHINGTON.-If my theory realized that looking a smart horse trader's offering in the teeth doesn't tell you much more about what you are buying than, nowadays, we can learn from kicking a new car in the > Sometime during the Franklin Roosevelt years, however, we outgrew horses and started buying cars, after kicking the tires. Teeth have been the key to the presidency ever since.

> Just this summer Gov. Europers of Arkansas was elected to replace William Fulbright in the Senate, and none of the professional analyses failed to mention that he had truly splendid teeth and was regarded by Arkansans as a man who might some day win a place on a Democratic presidential ticket.

> Not having been exposed to the impact of Bumpers's dental clout. I am in no position to handicap him for the 1976 presidential teethstakes, but in moving up to the national stage he will need a powerful set of grinders to keep up with the competition.

Aside from the overpowering enamel supporting Sen Ken-nedy's claim to the White House, there is the truly staggering force of Nelson Rockefeller's ear-toear display. If man had 72 teeth, Rockefeller would be able to display them all, so awesome is his lip-retraction power.

Ronald Reagan, Elliot Richardson. Gerald Ford and Charles Percy all enter the competition with teeth that look capable of devouring a hog in less time than it takes to say "specificity." Richardson, however, shows a reluctance to display his molars, which could severely damage his chance of becoming president. American voters want to see the whole jawload before they sur-

Sen, Jackson's campaign might his wisdom teeth into view when the cameras arrive, but with his present modest display, which is scarcely enough to scare a baby out of the hiccups, he must be rated far behind Sen. Kennedy. Sen, Mondale, who would also like people to mention him as a presidential candidate, seems a hopeless case. He has scarcely more lip retraction than Henry Kissinger, which means he can display nothing at all behind the bicuspids, and although what we can see are very impressive indeed—as are Kissinger's—the country is not ready to elect a man who keeps more than half of his gums to himself. What we desire apparently, is a president who can uphold the glory of American dentistry while

The gaping hole where the pavilions of Les Halles once stood.

Giscard Steps In to Give Paris a Park

By Molly Browne

PARIS, Aug. 6 (IIRT).—In the center of Paris is a gaping hole, where Les Halles, the main market place of Paris since the 12th century, once stood. Gone are the glass and iron pavilions built in the 19th century by Baltard. Gone are the forts the men who carried sides of beef around, pushed trolleys of vegetables. Since the payilions were torn down in 1971, the area has developed a new character—with art galleries, trendy shops, restaurants springing up here and there—and with places set aside where the curious could watch destruction and planned construction.

Until a few days ago, everyone knew what was going to fill up that gap of 80 acres: a huge international trade center, an underground commercial center, a subterranean expressway. Nearby, across the Boulevard Sebastopol, would be the modern art museum that was the pet project of the late President Georges Pompidou, a museum that would bear his name. Then, the Administrative Tribunal, which issues building permits, canceled both projects and the predictable protests began with some 60 groups agitating for a rational, overall plan for the whole area.

Today, Prench President Valery Giscard d'Estaing stepped in, settling the issue. There will be no trade center. The expressway project will be cut back-whatever that may mean. The subterranean shopping center goes on. The museum will be built. Instead of the trade center, there will be a "green space" designed by a landscape architect as yet unnamed. Giscard-who has been making a habit of stepping in to save old Paris-expects to have the plans before him in the fall.

This is the third time that the recently elected President has wielded his power to protect Paris architecture. The first was in June when he canceled the controversial Left Bank expressway, which opponents contended would ruin the character of the neighborhood. The second, again in June, was when he saved the Cite Fleurie, an artists' enclave, from developers who wanted to build modern apartment houses on the While ecologists and environmentalists may be delighted with Giscard's attempts to preserve the character of Paris and to increase its park facilities, there is rumbling in some sectors where the President's actions are seen as high-handed. He has, in fact, bypassed the Paris City Council, overruling their decisions in some instances.

Few would dispute the need for more parks in Paris-said to be the capital with the smallest amount of park space per in-habitant in the world. Technically, the Bois de Vincennes (995 hectares) and the Bois de Boulogne (845 hectares) are in Paris, Practically, they are not. If you include them, Paris residents have 2,653 hectares of public parks plus 326 hectares of public squares and gardens.

This means that there are 3 square meters of green space for every Parisian who number about 2.59 million)—if you count the Bois de Vincennes and the Bois de Boulogne. If you leave these parks out, each Parisian has about a square meter apiece. This is in contrast with the French government's own recommendations of 10 square meters a person—a recommendation advocated by international environmental

The objections to the proposed trade center were several. An organization with an unwieldy name—Bureau de Lizison de Associations de Défense de l'Environnement à Paris and Dans la Région Parisienne-has been leading the fight, As the bureau's attorney Henri SabreLuce put it, the trade center would have masked the façade of Saint-Eustache, Gothic in plan, Renaissance in decoration and generally considered the most beautiful church in Paris after Notre Dame, "It is not legal to build this sort of construction in that area," he said, pointing out that a special permit would have been

The idea of putting a trade center in the middle of Paris seemed wrong to many others particularly when every effort is being made to locate new office buildings on the periphery of the city—at the Rond Point de la Défense, at Porte Maillot with its new Palais des Congrès.

Yes, but what about profits that such an undertaking might have made? Mr. Sabre-Luce believes that, in the long run, the park will be more "profitable" than any office buildings. "People are fleeing a city which is impossible to live in," he said. The more parks Parls has, the better life in the city will become. He thinks in the long run that this will mean fewer car accidents as city dwellers stop speeding out of town on weekends to get away from it all. Fewer country houses. Savings in gas. Apparently Giscard d'Estaing has seen the

As for the museum, the critics were for the idea and against the form. The building is to be about 50 meters high and 160 meters long. "It's too high in proportion to the other buildings in the area," said Mr. Sabre-Luce. The legal limit there is 25 meters. And the building will be monolithic. In its manifesto, published in Le Monde today, the bureau said that the Pompidou museum would be "a gigantic wall, a monster in Paris, like the Tour Montparnasse."

Apparently, the French President doesn't agree, for no changes in the architectural plans were proposed today.
